The United States has given men and money without stint to help secure the victory for a common cause. In extending credit to our Allies to the extent of a sum that may eventually reach ten thousand million dollars our Government has made no conditions and driven no bargains. In sending soldiers and armed ships abroad, we have cooperated wholeheartedly, without ever raising any question which implied distrust for the future. We have believed that the generous attitude and the crusading spirit on our part would not fail to meet with a like attitude and spirit on the part of the British and French people. Until we have some evidence to the contrary, it will be just and right to believe that our Allies are to be permanent friends; and that they are not planning for a future that would ignore the great lessons of the war. President Wilson's reported utterances after his arrival in France were eminently appropriate and there was no reason to think that his point of view was not in general harmony with those of the leaders of Western European thought. There are problems of immense difficulty pending; but victories of peace will be won.

When we go to purchase a pound of butter and we feel like we are bargaining for a famous sky-scraper, according to the amount of coin we are called upon to part with to secure it, we must not blame the farmer. He is the innocent party in the affair and his, on the whole, is the smallest profit in the transaction. We must not blame the retailer because he is not more guilty than the farmer; he must dispense with his merchandise in a manner to net him some small gain or like any enterprising business man he feels that he will soon have to close doors.

The man whom we do want to account for the great sustenance in prices in food stuffs, triply, before the war, during the war and after the war, is the middle man.

Of what need is this middle-man, anyway? What work does he do to earn his living? The farmer raises the produce, the retailer pays his help to sell it to you, you pay for the right to consume it and all the while the man who does no work, who reaps the greatest revenue, is Plenty of exercise, fresh air, regular hours—is all the prescription that need to avoid influenza—unless through neglect or otherwise, a cold gets you. Then take—at once—smiling with his hands clasped behind his comatous desk.

It would be nearly impossible to find such an individual existing in any progressing firm. He would be useless and an unpayable proposition in any branch of the business world. Men are daily losing their positions because they cannot do the work they are called upon to do, properly. And, yet, there are thousands of these fake business statuettes decorating the country and being paid for it, too.

The world's greatest men grew upward from the lower classes, while the world's mean men grew downward from the upper class.

Many more towns die for want of confidence on the part of the business men and lack of public spirit, than those from opposition of neighboring towns and adverse surroundings.

We are pleased to note a desire on the part of our readers to secure at the first possible moment a copy of the Sentinel. The reason is, we do our best to give you the news all the time. We want you to help us make it still better by notifying us of the deaths, marriages or any other important transactions in which any one from this county is concerned.

Jim Kinnard, a member of Co. E, 117th infantry, who has been battling with the Huns in France since his arrival there in May 1918, arrived home Friday. He left here in September, 1917 and has had some thrilling experiences since that time. He suffered being gassed by the devilish Hun, while returning to his trench after a hard fought battle. He was also, a victim of Trench fever, which was accompanied by severe suffering. On account of his many friends wanting to talk with him, the editor did not have a chance to interview him, but hope to at an early date.

COULD HARDLY STAND ALONE

Terrible Suffering From Headache, Sideache, Backache, and Weakness, Relieved by Cardui, Says This Texas Lady.

Gonzales, Tex.—Mrs. Minnie Phelps, of this place, writes: "Five years ago I was taken with a pain in my left side. It was right under my left rib. It would commence with aching and extend up into my left shoulder and on down into my back. By that time the pain would be so severe I would have to take to bed, and suffered usually about three days. I suffered this way for three years, and got to be a mere skeleton and was so weak I could hardly stand alone. Was not able to go anywhere and had to let my house work go. I suffered awful with a pain in my back and I just was unable to do a thing. My life was a misery, my stomach got in an awful condition, caused from taking so much medicine. I suffered so much pain. I had just about given up all hopes of our getting anything to help me.

One day a Birthday Almanac was thrown in my yard. After reading its testimonials I decided to try Cardui, and am so thankful that I did, for I began to improve when on the second bottle. I am now a well woman and feeling fine and the cure has been permanent for it has been two years since my awful bad health. I will always praise and recommend Cardui." Try Cardui today.
